OUTLINE FOR INTERVIEW

1. Claims 33 and 35-37

I. McClintock, Sony S50 Manual and Kelly do not create prima facie case of obviousness for a handheld device with a receiver that receives local and remote video content.

a. McClintock's recorder must receive and display multiple local views split screen (Figure 10) in order to let the user switch recording between views in real-time.

b. Sony S50 could not simultaneously receive multiple local camera transmissions.

c. Sony S50 only has a TV tuner, but TV broadcast frequencies could not be used for McClintock local content.

d. Sony S50 TV tuner would not be capable of receiving reliable video transmission directly from McClintock's camera because of Tx and Rx power limits, distance and interference from surrounding environment.

II. Modifying McClintock would render McClintock in-operative for intended purpose

- a. Page 28 of Sony S50 Manual says recorder cannot record one channel while watching another channel.
- b. Therefore, if McClintock's user watched TV, the user could not record local event.
